Darrow School Announces Agreement to Acquire the Together for Youth/Berkshire Farm Campus in Canaan, New York

New Lebanon, N.Y.— Darrow School is pleased to announce that it has entered into an agreement to acquire the Together for Youth/Berkshire Farm campus in nearby Canaan, New York. This milestone marks a significant step forward in the School's long-term strategy to strengthen its academic and residential programs while meeting growing enrollment demand.

As Darrow advances toward an enrollment of more than 300 students in the coming years, the acquisition will provide immediate and much-needed residential capacity. The Together for Youth/Berkshire Farm campus, located just two miles from Darrow, offers modern facilities and substantial space to support the School's expanding student body and evolving programmatic needs.

"This is an exciting and transformative opportunity for Darrow," said Head of School, Andy Vadnais. "The Together for Youth/Berkshire Farm campus allows us to thoughtfully scale our model while preserving the close-knit, mission-driven community that defines the Darrow experience."

In addition to residential capacity, the property brings significant enhancements to Darrow's co-curricular offerings. The campus includes athletic facilities that will be upgraded to support both school-year and summer programming. It also provides expanded opportunities for camps and experiential learning, including access to Queechy Lake. Through the acquisition, Darrow will own approximately one-third of the lake's frontage, creating new possibilities for waterfront programming and student life.

The acquisition aligns with Darrow's broader strategic vision to invest in people, place, and program as the School approaches its centennial in 2032. It reflects a commitment not only to growth, but to long-term sustainability and educational excellence.

Details of the acquisition, including financial terms and development timelines, will be shared at a later date as due diligence and planning are completed.
